The Rural Monitor

Creating Rural Physician Training Sites: Not Easy, Not Simple, But Happening With Federal Support

Building on research showing that physicians trained in rural areas are more likely to stay rural, federal funding is supporting new rural residency program start-ups to help mitigate the prediction of a 60% rural physician shortage. Three healthcare leaders, located in sites from rural coast to rural coast, tell their organization's story of how this support is making a difference not just in healthcare access, but impacting their community in other ways.

How People Use RHIhub

I use your weekly news digest and actively share content with community partners. I am able to look at grant opportunities, resources and all sorts that helps me be more effective in my role.

I started a CHW Program in my area with the information and toolkit I researched on the website.

11

How People Use RHIhub

I can't say enough about what a valuable resource this is for my work. It has saved me countless hours of individual research, provided inspiration for new ideas or patient service opportunities and provided connection to other rural healthcare providers.

I have used shared information for grant writing (statistical data), read various articles for possible program implementation to address health disparities, and have forwarded links for possible funding opportunities.
